[DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

EASTERN DATES TO AUGUST 17.

The French Cause Desperate

LONDON, August 17. The Herald's cable dispatch says the French army of the Rhine have received coupe de grace near Metz, and is now in a disastrous retreat towards Verdun in a shattered condition. The soldiers, individually, are desperate.

The Emperor is believed yet to be in actual command of the army.

Siege of Strasbourg.

SAARBRUCKEN, August 17—via Berlin—King William has appointed Governor Generals for Lorraine and Alsace.

LONDON, August 17.—A dispatch from Carlsruhe, headquarters of the Baden army, says the people and garrison of Strasbourg have labored with zeal to arm the ramparts, clear glacis and barricade the entrances, but the besiegers have destroyed much of their work. On the 13th three slight conflicts took place. A detachment of Baden troops set fire to a railway train while it was standing in a station, and one of their batteries approached within three hundred paces of the fortress and fired on the rampart. The Baden troops lost three killed and seventeen wounded.

LONDON, August 17.—Paris journals confess inability to explain the course of recent military events, in consequence of a confusion of dates and lack of authentic advices.

LONDON, August 17.—The Tribune's special at Chalons writes Sunday, that 10,000 wounded are being brought into camp. The town and camp presents a scene of riot, disorder and dissipation. If another battle is lost it will be a massacre.

Gen. Sheridan at Prussian Headquarters.

FRANKFORT, August 17.—Gen. Sheridan with Consul General Webster, has, through the good offices of Minister Bancroft, been cheerfully accorded permission by the military authorities, to follow the campaign, with headquarters of the King.

Another Engagement.

PARIS, August 17.—An official dispatch has been made public as follows:

METZ, August 17—3 P. M.—We had a serious engagement yesterday near Gravelotte. We gained an advantage but lost heavily. Gravelotte is a small village six miles southwest of Metz and two miles west of Moselle.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Dispatch from Seattle.

SEATTLE, August 18.—Messrs. Tilton and Flint, who have the superintendency of the location of the Northern Pacific Railroad, arrived in this city on Monday and started on a tour of inspection over the Cascade mountains, via the Snoqualmie Pass.

The party sent over the Skadgit Pass route on an exploring expedition, for the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, have completed their work and returned to this city yesterday.

The Sheriff has seized by virtue of writs of attachment, the stock of goods formerly belonging to Brunn & Co. Several suits have been instituted against the firm by parties here and by San Francisco creditors. Amount of all the claims, about $5,000.

FOREIGN NOTES.

Commenting on the great French meeting in Dublin, the Dublin Irishman says that Napoleon's enterprise "is a war for honor, which Ireland understands." It is really a war for territory, which the French just now think Napoleon himself does not understand.

The London Civil Service Gazette says: "The extinction of the British national debt is a feat of finance which some day may be accomplished, but not, we fear, in our generation. Nevertheless, it is a favorite dream with Utopian philosophers and reformers; inventors torture their brains upon it, and professors of legerdemain exercise their wits upon it incessantly."

Whether Prussia was really contemplating an extension of her limits when France struck her in the face, may not be known to the present generation. French statesmen profess to believe that Bismarck was meditating some steps like those which took Prussia across the Eyder and into Bohemia and Hanover. The aggressor in great wars has not always been the side which first lost patience. The conduct of Prussia in delaying the execution of the treaty of Prague to the injury of Denmark, and the pressure she has exercised to render purely nominal the independent sovereignty of the South German States, are quoted against her now. But in the roar of the murderous conflict, such discussions seem vain.

A year or two ago enormous numbers of German emigrants were in the habit of proceeding, via Liverpool, to this country, particularly during the autumn. More recently, however, that branch of emigration has been conducted from Hamburg and other German ports, so that it is expected in Liverpool that the emigration trade there will not sustain any serious diminution from the impending war, unless, indeed, Denmark, Sweden, and Norway (from which two countries emigration via Liverpool has latterly been extensive) be drawn into the conflict. It is anticipated, that, notwithstanding the restrictions on the Continent, large numbers of intending German emigrants will pass the frontier into Holland and Belgium, and take passage thence to America.

Berlin correspondence [July 15th] of the London News gives this: The excitement here has become intense, and its character serious. Some houses in the West-end to-day have begun to display flags. The crowd yesterday evening at the corner of Unter den Linden and Frederick street was enormous, and the broad streets were everywhere filled in a manner which hardly permitted the numerous carriages to pass. This morning a similar scene was enacted in the eastern parts of the town in the neighborhood of the Bourse. Numerous family meetings are already taking place to make arrangements for "the great war." The angry feelings one hears expressed everywhere have for their object not only the French government, but the French people. They must be put under tutelage—this is the general cry. The newspapers call Paris a lunatic asylum under an ignorant Italian doctor, who knows no remedy but bleeding.

The Vienna Wanderer, in an article on France and the European equilibrium, observes: "The preponderance of France is sapping the equilibrium of Europe, and turning the independence of the Latin nations into a meaningless expression. France insists on prescribing to the Spaniards whom they are to take for King, and condemns the Italians to suffer eternally the flagrant shame of their nation—the temporal power of the Papacy. Nay, more! The external policy of France makes her the incubus of all other European States, whose internal tranquility she disturbs to an unprecedented extent. We owe it to France that the farce of Papal infallibility, in spite of the admonitions of the different Cabinets, has been brought on the stage, that religious harmony has been interrupted, the legitimate position of the State to the Church made a matter of debate, and the foundations of the civil power undermined."

At one of the battles of the rebellion, a young man of Greenville, S. C., was shot in the eye, and the bullet lodging in the head could not be extracted by the most skillful surgeons, and caused continued annoyance. Recently, however, the sufferer was seized with a violent fit of coughing, during which the bullet, weighing half an ounce, dropped into his mouth. In six years the bullet had worked its way slowly through the palate, and was released by the convulsive effort of coughing.

There is something of a revulsion in England against free trade. Several prominent writers have lately published elaborate arguments to show that the manufactures of the country are suffering under her present policy. Those who are clamoring so violently on the subject here might well study opinion and results there.

The French Uprising.

EXCITING SCENES IN PARIS—THE FRENCH ENTHUSIASM COMPARED TO THAT OF THE NORTH AFTER THE FALL OF SUMTER.

[Correspondence New York Tribune.]

PARIS, July 22.—For a day or two back there has been an apparent lull in the gathering storm of war, but it is merely superficial and shows intense absorption in the great event of the day, not that the public mind is cooling in its fervor. I have been a spectator during one great war, which was popular if ever a war were popular, and comparing what I am seeing now with what I saw at home, I cannot for a moment doubt that in throwing down the glove to Prussia the Government had, and knew it had, the vast body of the people at its back, and that it could not have kept the peace if it had wished it ever so much. I believe those who say that the Emperor was averse to the war are mistaken. It is true that his health is in a wretched state, and that the excitement of carrying on a war at this time is a thing he may dread: and it is true that in real, sober earnest he did try, some two or three years ago, to bring about a disarmament, but it is also true that the Emperor knows, or believes he knows, that Bismarck had fully made up his mind, in case the plebiscite went against the Government, to make a move fatal to the interest of France which, yet, she would be powerless to resist. Since he was convinced of this the Emperor has been determined to fight, and there are those who say that the Prussian candidature is entirely a scheme of the Emperor and Prim's invention, and that it is Prussia that has been duped into giving France the excuse she wanted for fighting. There may be no truth in this, but it was said, yesterday, by a person, whose name I cannot mention, and who ought to know something of what is going on, as he is inside the door. What is certain is, that communications between the Emperor and Prim are constant; that there is a powerful faction here arguing a movement in Spain in favor of the Prince of Austurias, and that ammunition of a very effective kind is being prepared in great quantities in view of that event. It is also evident from the revelations of the last few days that the reason given for declaring war were pure and simple fabrications. The alleged interview between the King of Prussia and the Benedetti at Ems, the refusal of the King to hear what the French Embassador had to say, the King's sending an aid-de-camp to dismiss the Embassador, and lastly, the dispatching of telegrams to the different Prussian Embassies to tell them beforehand of the insult the King intended to offer France—all these stories are inventions that, having served their turn, will soon be acknowledged for the falsehoods as gross exaggerations that they are. They were merely the matches which the hand of Napoleon applied to the fiery heart of France. Any stick or straw is food enough at a pinch to carry fire.

But, if Napoleon wished for an explosion ever so ardently, he must have been astonished beyond measure at the result of his maneuvers to bring it on. I have seen only one thing like it, and that was the excitement in New York at the news of the firing upon Sumter. Yet, even that, was less than this. For, there, there were men whose hearts did not beat with ours, there were voices silent, there were feet that held back. But, here the men who do not hate Prussia, who do not hate her rulers, who do not leap at the chance of fighting her, are few and far between. Almost all the old hatreds are forgotten, and the hatchet is buried with unanimity to be dug up at a more convenient day. There is a prodigious enthusiasm for the war, but, below this boiling there is a deep, strong, resistless current, sweeping all before it, bearing on the nation to the supreme hour that will for a long time decide its destiny. Only one thing now can stop France in her bloodhound course, and that is the Emperor's death. If the gout in his thigh, which, for the past two days, has kept him, at St. Cloud, should mount a little higher, the scene would undergo a mighty transformation; but that is a mere chance. To-day he is at the Tuileries again, and we are assured that he will go to Nancy to-morrow. All that can be said is that this is one of the times when events hang upon a hair.

Whoever was in Paris last Sunday night, and on the Boulevard, saw a sight never to be forgotten. A regiment of Zouaves left for the frontier, and all Paris was on the war path with them. I happened to be just entering the Place de la Concorde as they came across the bridge, and getting a good place by the side of a drummer, with the trumpet of the man in his rear planted comfortably in my left ear, I found myself, before I knew it, borne along like a chip in a freshet. There was no going back even if I had wanted to. The square was well enough, but when the crowd tried to squeeze itself into the rue Royale, I thought we were going to have the massacre of 1770 over again. Any one who had tried to stop to tie his shoe, let us say, would never have wanted to tie his shoes any more! From wall to wall was a solid pavement of human heads, and out of every head came a shout, the shout not the hymn of the Marseillaise! When we reached the wider Boulevard, things were a little better, but not much, for we were merely a black river emptying into a black sea, and our wave soon mingled indistinguishably with the vaster flood. The sidewalks were crowded, the street was crowded, and every window was filled with people cheering, shouting, singing, and waving handkerchiefs. No omnibus nor cab had a ghost of a chance. Many escaped down side streets, but the greater part drew up in line along one side of the Boulevard, and waited, the crowd meanwhile taking advantage of the occasion, and swarming over omnibusses, cabs, and horses like ants over apple cores. The confusion was indescribable, for different sets of people were singing different airs, and the "Marseillaise," "Mourir pour la Patrie," the "Chant du Depart," and "Les Lampions," got so mixed up that it was all a roar through which you could only now and then hear a trumpet-blast, or a rattling drum, or the cry of "Vive la guerre!" "A bas la Prusse!" and rarely, very rarely, "Vive l'Empereur!" The regiment was in luck last night, for the crowd was ready to give 'em anything. Money was shoved at them by handsful, and some old fellows adroitly managed to get on the outside and thus grabbed more than their share. It was a sight to remember all one's life, and I was even glad, after living a year in the stifling air of Paris, to draw a free draught of real popular enthusiasm for something; like a half starved man, I didn't just then much care what it was was offered me—'twas something.

A different sight had been the going off of a regiment of chasseurs that same morning early. I heard the music as I sat in my eyrie chamber, and, stepping out on the balcony, saw the men filing down the narrow rue Bellechasse. The soldiers filled the street; the sidewalks were filled with young men, arms locked, singing the Marseillaise, and music of fife and trumpet, mixed with the chant of voices, came striking up between the high-walled houses. In the midst went the stout vivandiere, dressed in her best; no holiday now for her, but work in earnest, and mixed with the soldiers their mothers, wives, and lovers, keeping step and time. By one soldier went his wife, leading the little boy in her left hand, and in the other bearing the wee white-capped babe that sucked its thumb and leaped to hear the music. My God, it brought back such a rush of memories, and so many bitter sights at home that I am not ashamed to say my eyes were wet. How hateful seemed the ambition then that could, with a light heart, such as Ollivier boasts of, send these men in troops to the shambles.

NOTES ON THE WAR.

Chassepot rifles, to the number of 50,000, were made for the French Government, by a London house, in the early part of the present year.

A powerful party in the Danish Rigsdad has issued a manifesto, in which a demand is made for the reunion of North Schleswig with Denmark.

Metz, the headquarters of the French Army of the Rhine, is 170 miles from Paris. Troops can reach it from the capital by railroad in about five hours.

More than one thousand of the students at Bonn presented themselves on the outbreak of the war, and asked that they might be enrolled in defense of their country.

In a recent test for rapidity of firing the Chassepot rifle gave twenty rounds in one minute and forty two seconds. The bullet of the Chassepot weighs but 380 grains.

The North German Correspondent, July 13, says, "If bounds are not set to the arrogant pretensions of France, neither Germany nor any other neighbor of the French will ever be secure from the dictatorial interference of that Government in its affairs."

The news of the Prussian victory is received with exultation by the Radicals of Spain, who see in the defeat of Napoleon hopes of the restoration of the Republic in France, and consequently establishing the same in Spain. The monarchists are beginning to lose confidence.

Every French soldier carries a piece of canvas about five feet long by four broad, and a stick. When two of these pieces of canvas are joined together they form a tent; when six of them are built up they constitute a tent closed at both ends. The French soldier is thus independent of baggage animals for his house accommodation.

The Tribune's Washington special says; Persons here who ought to know something about the matter, say that the composition of the new French Ministry is indicative of two things, namely: That Napoleon does not intend to give up his position as head of the Empire, and that he intends using sharp and severe measures on the populace of Paris, if they attempt a revolution. The Ministry is spoken of as strongly devoted to Imperialism, and strongly opposed to the promises of reform put forth to carry the plebiscitum, and it is believed that the new Premier will advocate, and be sustained by his colleagues in adopting, a stern course against those who clamor against Napoleon and his policy.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times says that the popular feeling in Austria is with the German people. We quote this remark: "If there was in the beginning some ill humor against Prussia for furnishing a pretext for the disturbance of peace and our loss of all the advantages which were in store for us by the chances of considerable exports, it has completely vanished, and Vienna feels as German as any town on the Spree or on the Rhine. Hastily did all those calculate who expected that this people would harbor a feeling of revenge for the humiliation of 1866; and one of the leading papers well expresses the feeling when it says: 'They have excluded us from the German Empire, but they never will exclude us from the German people.'"

Californian and Eastern Contractors.

[From the San Francisco Commercial Herald.]

On the 29th of July, bids were opened in Washington for the construction of two steam revenue cutters, one to be 250 tons, built of wood, a side-wheeler, and destined for the Pacific coast; the other to be 350 tons, built of iron, a screw, and for service on the Atlantic. This is a strong discrimination in favor of the Atlantic, and, so far as we can determine, without sufficient cause. An iron vessel can be built or repaired here quite as thoroughly as at the East, and we need that kind of craft equally with the Atlantic coast; but we are not disposed to be captious on that point. Among the parties offering bids for the building of the wooden side-wheeler for the Pacific were three responsible San Francisco and four Eastern firms. The lowest California bid was $70,000, coin, and the lowest Eastern bid $47,500, probably in currency, although nothing is said about it in the dispatch. All the other Eastern offers ranged nearly at the same prices as those asked by the California firms, the great point of difference being in the nature of the currency in which payment is required, amounting to 20 per cent. But the most remarkable feature is the wonderful discrepancy which exists between the two lowest Eastern bids, being no less than $20,260: Thomas Slack of Greenpoint, N. Y., offering for $67,760, and Dialogue & Wood, of Camden, N. J., offering to build the vessel for $47,500. There must have been either a well developed greediness on the part of other bidders, or they could not have been very efficient calculators, provided Dialogue & Wood can really build a 250-ton side-wheel steamer, of the best materials, and put together in the most thorough manner, for the sum asked by them, and we cannot see why $190 per ton should not be enough to warrant them in their proposal. The price asked by the lowest California bidders was $240 per ton. The cost of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's side-wheelers was about $250 per ton; but it is not presumed that a revenue cutter should be fitted with the luxurious and almost regal appointments of a first-class floating palace. The cost of an A 1 sailing ship, built of the best materials, and elegantly fitted up in all departments, does not exceed $80 per ton, and we can see no good reason why an advance of $110 per ton should not be sufficient to give us a side-wheeler revenue cutter of 250 tons, amply suited to all requirements. Had our bidders been less exacting in their terms, they might probably have secured the contract, because the expense of sending the vessel round the Horn, instead of having her constructed at the scene of her future operation, would make a large margin of difference in their favor. It is much to be regretted that California should be ruled out of the field of competition with Eastern ship-builders on Government account, by a too great anxiety to make large personal profits. A more modest policy might have served us for an entering wedge, the results of which would have been widely beneficial. We contend that a side-wheel revenue cutter, fully adapted for the business, can be built for $190 per ton, and with fair profit to the contractors.

NAPOLEON AS A LEADER.—A correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing from Metz, July 19th says:

There is a report that the Emperor is coming here to-night. I may as well tell the readers of the Tribune once for all that the talk about Napoleon commanding his armies in person is mere bunkum, or as the French would say, de la blague. His Majesty is strictly ordered by his doctors to abstain from mounting a horse. Only a month or so ago he fell from his charger from pain, and the moment he got to the ground had a most alarming fainting fit, which lasted for more than twenty minutes. How is a man in this state of health to sit, like Wellington at Waterloo, for twelve hours without ever getting out of the saddle, or like Napoleon's own rival in the coming campaign—William of Prussia—from three in the morning till five in the afternoon? It is said that Eugenie has had a wonderfully light and strong carriage made for her husband's use, but, even if this be true, how is he to get across ditches or down sharp slopes in order to reach the points of the field from which a view of the fight may be best obtainable? No, it is no secret in France, and the first officer you meet will laugh if you ask whether the Emperor is a good leader. "He cannot ride now," they say, "and as for his abilities as a leader, demandez a MacMahon." This means that at Magenta, during the Italian campaign of '59, Napoleon rode in the wrong direction, and narrowly escaped falling into the hands of the Austrians, being only rescued by a brilliant charge of cavalry, headed by Gen. MacMahon.

"I am going to draw this beau into a knot," as the lady said at the hymenial altar.

A Southern Oregon Democratic Paper on the Railroad Situation

The Jacksonville News [Democratic] thinks that Congressman Smith and the Herald are doing [illegible] sensible [illegible] in veering round to a proper position on the Williams amendment to the Humboldt branch railroad bill. Less than three months ago both Congressman Smith and the Herald were letting fly at Senator Williams the most [illegible] shafts of denunciation and calumny, attempting to blacken his reputation and assailing him as the betrayer of the highest and most important interests of the State, and all because he had proposed this amendment to the Humboldt Branch railroad bill. Yet Mr Smith and the Herald are now complimented and commended by a Democratic paper for veering round toward Williams' position. This commendation has all the force of a stinging reproach against them for their former action. To be told that they are now evincing good sense by accepting the proposition which they characterized but a little while ago as so base in its conception and so injurious to the State, may gratify them, but if they consider it an encomium they are very easily flattered.

But we would advise the News that while they are apparently veering round and professing a willingness to support the Williams amendment they are still working against the interests of Southern Oregon. They are for that amendment in the form, they are against it in all the substance. We appeal for the proof to Mr Smith's recent letter. He says he will vote for the amendment, not because it will give the southern counties a railway, but because it will enable the Central Pacific Company to take part of the grant and use it for their Humboldt-Eugene branch. They can build their road on the grant from the Humboldt as far as that grant lies in their route, then throw away the rest of it, run on the east side of the mountains till they reach a point opposite Eugene, and then pass over. In this way the southern counties would still be left without a railroad. Mr Smith does not care whether they have one or not; he is intent only on what the Central Pacific Company ask for in the matter. Senator Williams would not only have the grant made in such a manner as to favor the southern counties, but he would, if necessary, have a provision inserted that no company should have any part of it unless they would actually build the road into the valley of Rogue river.

In another article the News continues the discussion of the railroad problem and says that "the whole thing hinges on Congressional action." So it does. It all depends on the fate of Senator Williams' amendment. And the probability is that that amendment will be lost, for he will not long be in a position to support it. "What we have to fear," says the News, "is the ignorance of Congressmen with regard to the nature of the country over which the railroad is to be built, and the influence of the 'lobby.'" Precisely so. And who can you send to take Williams' place who will be able to enlighten them and have influence enough to carry the measure through? Nobody. No Democrat can do anything, for the entire Pacific coast delegation in both Houses, with the single exception of Williams, is against the measure. Smith now pretends to be for it, but he admits that he is for it only for the purpose before stated, that is, to enable the Central Pacific Company to use part of the grant in building the branch to Eugene City. Again, the News says: "Pengra and his coadjutors are persistent and untiring in their determination to have the road enter the Wallamet in the direction of Eugene." True again, and after Williams' opposition is withdrawn they will have power to carry out their purpose. The News may well be afraid of what it calls the "stupendous combination of interests in the Wallamet valley"—(it is not wholly in the Wallamet valley, but in great part in California)—"to frustrate the prospects of Southern Oregon."

As Senator Williams said in his letter which was published last month, the southern counties "cannot complain if he should conclude that they have disapproved his action on the Pengra bill, to which he had only been opposed because he considered it unfavorable to their interests." The expression of the southern counties at the polls is apparently against the measure which the News is so anxious should succeed, and they would have no right whatever to complain if Williams should construe it so, withdraw his opposition to the Pengra scheme and allow the measure to pass in the shape in which the Herald Congressman Smith and the Central Pacific company are so anxious to have it. We do not know that he will do so, we simply say that a railroad should not be forced on the people of the southern counties unless they want it—and they don't want it, if we may judge of their action in the late election.

Free Trade in the Coming Elections

A considerable number of newspapers throughout the country are skyrocketting on free trade theories, and the Democrats in many places are laboring to make an issue against protection in the approaching elections. The signs, however, are not propitious for success in this line. But as the opposition are hard pressed for issues, it were almost cruel to complain of them for trying to make some capital out of this old and much discussed subject.

Investigation and experience have proved that civilization and national power proceed in exact proportion to the diversification of industry. Now in this view, we ask what produces diversification of industry so perfectly as a protective tariff. What so thoroughly breaks it down as free trade? In this light, free trade means national dependence and national weakness; protection means reinforcement of every influence that builds up and strengthens national independence and national virility.

Suppose all tariff duties repealed, direct taxation established, and every barrier erected against the influx of foreign competition torn down, what would be the consequence? Every iron, cotton, woolen, copper, and other industry in this country would cease to exist. Hundreds of thousands of artisans engaged in these employments would be dispersed upon the single pursuit of agriculture. As foreign countries even now buy a very small part of our soil products we would find ourselves unable to pay for our present rate of importations. Hence they would fall off, and with these diminutions we would soon find ourselves reduced to what may be designated as colonial dependence. Now all experience shows that a people devoted to one pursuit is easily made the slave of despotism. In truth of this proposition we refer to any nation where diversification of industry is least. An unavoidable deduction from such facts is that diversity of employments in a country [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] will lead to this end. Whatever stands in the way of this accomplishment may be stigmatized as free trade; whatever conserves its movement may be designated as protection.

Our people now know [illegible] than they ever knew [illegible]. Those who talk about free trade [illegible] of that which is purely [illegible] must maintain a [illegible] revenue [illegible] the truest way of maintaining it.

Though the English press as a whole leans to the side of Prussia, there are several journals that vigorously advocate the cause and policy of France. The chief of these is the London Telegraph. The course pursued by these journals is to protest against a renewal of the traditional jealousy of England towards France, and to enlarge upon the good will which the imperial government has manifested towards Great Britain in the last eighteen years. France, they suggest, was being gradually encircled in a grasp of steel. Before Sadowa was fought she was the arbiter of Europe, the power to be first consulted and deferred to in every European complication. The natural growth of Germany operates necessarily as a check upon France, and the natural resentment which the sense of this check arouses finds expression in war. England ought, it is urged, to understand and respect the sentiment of the French people. To say that France had no right to be jealous of German unity is to throw over all the theories by which the European States have been governed since the middle ages. So of course, there are influential public men who contend that no one has any right to be angry with any State which still adheres to them. The selfish point of view is not overlooked, and Englishmen are carefully reminded that if Prussia should be beaten, of the four great Powers who combined to crush France during the Napoleonic period she will have retaliated upon all but one. Why needlessly irritate her?

The New York Herald, in an article on the bearing of the European war on American politics, observes that there is likely to be a marked separation between the Germans and Irish at the polls in the coming election. "Even now," says that paper, "there are signs which cannot be mistaken of this political separation between our Irish and German-born citizens, and with Sigel as the Republican candidate for Governor this fall, and as the representative of 'Fatherland' against the Bonapartes, who can doubt what will be the vote of every German voter in New York? Every man of them will vote for Sigel."

General Steinmetz, who commands one corps of the Prussian army, and who is often mentioned in the dispatches, is seventy four years of age. He began his military career in the wars of the first Napoleon. In May, 1813, he fought as a lieutenant at the battle of Bautzen and was severely wounded. He fought in France in nearly all the engagements in 1814 and entered Paris with the allies when Napoleon was overthrown. It is particularly noticeable that nearly all the officers of high rank on both sides in the present war are upwards of sixty years of age.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL

Rev Dr Martin A Tupper, of Washington, Ga, a cousin of the "proverbial philosopher," preached a sermon a Sunday or two since at Madison college, Hamilton, N Y. He was a strong rebel during the war, and this is his first visit to the college for 21 years.

Gen William Terry, who commanded the Stonewall brigade after Jackson's death, has been nominated for Congress by the Democrats in the eighth Virginia district, which is in the south western corner of the State, and contains but few negroes or white Republicans, so that he will probably be elected.

The San Francisco Examiner, Democratic organ, declares it won't support any nominee who don't subscribe for it; in other words, its support can be purchased for any nominee on the Democratic ticket for "two bits a week," and concludes by declaring that it "means business." We should say so. Very mean business.

The Democratic candidate for Congress in one of the Indiana districts is William C Moreau, who was dishonorably dismissed from the army in 1863 by order of General George H Thomas "for having tendered his resignation while under charges for obtaining money under false pretences, and other conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, and having twice absconded from this Department to avoid a trial upon these charges." Democracy sometimes shows a liking for soldiers, but it is too often this class of soldiers.

Jeff Davis has gone to Europe. The New York Herald pokes fun at him, as follows: A Mississippi paper says it has reason to believe that Jeff Davis has been invited by a crowned head to visit Europe and engage in a "little on pleasantness" going on there. It thinks that in such an event thousands of ex Confederate soldiers would follow their late chief, and expresses the hope that Jeff "may be made a Marshal of France." That is not a bad idea. But Humphrey Marshall, of Kentucky—fighting weight three hundred and fifty—should accompany Davis in order to maintain the balance of power wherever the fate of war should lead them. We rather think, however, that the ex Confederate chief would prefer the peaceful waters of the Biarritz to the more warlike flood of the Rhine.

CALIFORNIA AND NEVADA

Two Chinamen have been received as members of the First Congregational Church of Oakland.

Property in Hamilton, the principal town of White Pine, has depreciated sixty per cent within a year.

The quicksilver mines in San Bernardino county are being opened, and the owners report themselves satisfied with the prospects.

The returns of the School Census Marshal show that there are in San Francisco 20 000 boys between the ages of ten and eighteen, who are unemployed and who do not attend school.

About one hundred and fifty men are now employed at the Government works on Mare Island. It is expected that this force will soon be increased. A large engine is being constructed to furnish motive power for the machine shops.

A suit for breach of promise has been commenced by a young lady of Sacramento against a fickle swain, who after repeatedly promising to marry her, fails to fulfill his promises. She claims damage to her affections in the sum of $2 5 0.

The printers' strike in San Francisco has had the effect of placing some twenty five women at the case, and a number are learning to operate the telegraph. One young lady already has charge of one of the Western Union branch offices in that city.

A general election was held in Kentucky for State officers on the first Monday of this month. For the first time the negroes voted. They were not molested. The result shows what might have been expected, that they went almost as a unit for the Republicans. In every county there is a heavy decline in the Democratic majority. In 1868 that party had 88,678 majority. This year it is not likely to come out with half as much. In Louisville, Seymour beat Grant 9,591 votes; this year the Democratic majority is 4 200. In 1868 the Republicans of that county polled but 1 481 votes, this year over 7,000. Frankfort gave Seymour 600 majority. It now gives his party but 260, and so on throughout the State. The Congressional election takes place in November, and it is believed that the Republicans will elect two and possibly three members.

WAR NEWS BY TELEGRAPH

PARIS, August 11, Midnight.—[illegible] much [illegible] the [illegible] of the Great Powers [illegible] peace. France says the Gaulois cannot [illegible] a conference. It would be incompatible with her dignity. Such was the first sentiment of [illegible] when informed of his nomination to the Ministry.

PARIS, August 11.—The Figaro says a physician just returned from the front reports that [illegible] the Prussians acknowledge the superiority of the French guns. Nearly all the French killed were wounded in the legs and feet, while in the battle of Worth the loss of the Prussians in killed and in the [illegible] wounded was immense, owing to the longer range of the Chassepots. These facts produce an astounding impression on the soldiers.

The Monde gives the following account of Gen Douay at the battle of Weissenburg: The General was from the beginning in the thickest of the fight. When he saw the day lost, after he had done all he could to retrieve it, at a time when even a battalion was left him, he called his A D C's [illegible] and gave them orders and sent them away. As soon as the last was gone the General, spurring his horse, rode some distance to the front, dismounted, and taking a pistol from the holster shot the animal. Then, turning around, he slowly walked toward the enemy. His soldiers vainly tried to stop him amid a terrible fire. He deliberately walked on. The retreating soldiers, aroused by the spectacle, turned again upon the enemy, but fell in heaps around their General, who still pressed onward. Another tremendous discharge from the enemy and Douay, almost alone, fell dead.

WASHINGTON, August 11.—A letter from a well known American in Berlin on intimate terms with the Government of the North German Confederation, furnishes the information that the project to place Prince Hohenzollern on the throne of Spain, was purposely concealed by the Prince from King William for some time. When the King was consulted, the project received his prompt and unqualified disapprobation, the King arguing that considering the peculiar temperament of the Spanish people such a proceeding would probably be a second Maximilian affair, resulting in the loss of the Prince's head. The writer further says that the King held those views up to the time of the French Government's peremptory demand through Benedetti for an explanation, and nothing but the tone and manner in which the demand was made, and afterwards followed up by him for guarantees, prevented any further reference to the subject by the King.

LONDON, August 11.—The King of Prussia has issued the following proclamation:

"We, William, King of Prussia, make known to all the inhabitants of French territory occupied by German forces that the Emperor Napoleon having, by sea and land, attacked the German nation, eager to live in peace with the French people, we have taken command of the German armies to repel aggression, and by military events have been led to pass the French frontier. We war against soldiers, not citizens, therefore the latter may continue secure in possession of their property so long as they abstain from hostilities, and we grant them protection as a matter of right. The Generals commanding corps will decide what measures are necessary toward individual commanders violating the usages of war. They will also regulate the requisitions necessary to sustain their troops, and fix the difference of exchange between German and French currency, in order to facilitate dealing of soldiers and citizens. (Signed) WILLIAM.

"Given at Saarbruck on the 11th day of August, 1870."

Origin of the War

NATIONAL PREJUDICE AND SENSIBILITIES—A NATIONAL AND NOT A DYNASTIC CONTEST

[From the Pall Mall Gazette.]

There is hardly a Frenchman or a German who has not looked forward to this war as inevitable for the last four years. It must have entered into the calculations of the statesmen of Prussia when they measured their strength against Austria; it has held its place in the calculations of the statesmen of France since the day when Austria was proved the weaker. For the present, at all events, we do not doubt that Frenchmen are quite in earnest when they disclaim all thoughts of territorial aggrandizement. How long this moderation would endure under the excitement of a great victory is another matter, but as regards the feelings in which the contest originates the statement may easily be quite true. France has gone to war rather from fear than from ambition, rather from a belief that it is essential to her very existence to check the growth of Prussia than from any conscious desire to extend her own limits. She has seen Prussia suddenly assume a position in Europe at least equal to her own. That chaotic Germany which excited no fears, planned no surprises, pursued no policy, has become organized and organized under influences which must inevitably lead it to aim at becoming still greater. The old Confederation was obviously a mask for weakness, not a source of power. The interests of its members were so conflicting that such strength as each possessed only served to neutralize the strength of its neighbor. Now the whole of Germany, north of the Main, is an instrument in the hands of a single State, and all beyond that boundary threatens to follow the same irresistible law. It is not against Prussia merely that France has armed herself. If Austria had been the uniting force in Germany, she might have come in for the same hostility. It is true that the ambition manifested of late by Prussia has been of a peculiarly irritating, aggressive kind, and the fact that it has been gratified at the cost of overriding a good many native wishes to arrive at German unity by a pleasanter road has enabled Frenchmen to persuade themselves that it is the violence and greed of Prussia that most excites their enmity. It is pretty clear, however, that it is the end which is being brought about, not the means employed to bring it about, that really governs the action of France. If Germany had become one among the bleating of lambs instead of the roar of the cannon, it would still have been a change of sad and evil omen in the eyes of a true Frenchman. He thinks, or more accurately he feels that he cannot breathe freely in this new atmosphere. He cannot persuade himself that there can be room enough in Europe for France and Germany, supposing Germany is to become a great and consolidated empire. Perhaps a reflection how useful the cry of nationality, the claim founded on identity of race and speech, has been to his own country helps to increase his alarm. The left bank of the Rhine was once all German, and in some moment of future reverse Alsace may be filched away to give complete ness to the German inheritance. Even if Frenchmen could be brought to reject these fears there are others which are simple certainties. Whether France is or is not likely to suffer material loss at the hands of a united Germany, she is certain to suffer—nay, she has already suffered—a loss of influence and position which is hardly less galling to a proud and sensitive nation. France has gloried in being the arbiter of Europe, the Power to be first consulted and deferred to in every European difficulty, the permanent factor in every European combination. She has not been all this since Sadowa, and she cherishes a bitter hostility against the Power which has worked the change. It may be a sentimental grievance, but we in England have reason enough to know how keenly sentimental grievances may be felt, and how largely they affect the conduct and attitude of a whole nation. The natural growth of Germany operates necessarily as a check upon France, and the natural resentment which the sense of this check arouses finds expression in the present war. The political difficulties of the emperor and his [illegible] every—too late—that personal government is not easily transferable from father to son, have hastened the occasion and precipitated the disaster.

The Ninth Census

While our Western cities are growing rapidly, the Marshal's reports of actual figures do not justify the extravagant estimates put forth by some of the journals of the West. Chicago has been estimated as high as 400 000 inhabitants, but will fall much short of that. Of Cincinnati the Commercial says:

"It seems the census of the Fifteenth Ward of the city has been completed, and the result shows a population of 13 000. If that is all, and the remaining wards do not better the population of the old city will fall short of 175 000. If that is a correct estimate, the city has either not increased, or [illegible] the work of taking the census has been poorly done. The city of Chicago made an appropriation of $1 000 for the purpose of assisting the Marshal in his work. If we have a large population, now is the time to bunch them up and have them counted."

The Chicago Tribune says it is "not true that the authorities of Chicago have appropriated $10,000, or any other sum, for the purpose of assisting the Marshal in his work. It was St Louis that did it—not Chicago."

Of Milwaukie the Sentinel says:

"As regards our own city, we are not aware that any indications of the census figures have been given, but we shall not be surprised if we fall something short of the 100,000 people we have so long reckoned ourselves. At all events, there is not the least doubt that the estimate of 112 000, at which our population was set in the yearly reports of the Chamber of Commerce six months ago, will be found to have been inexcusably wild."

BABY SHOWS.—The intelligent London public have recently been entertained by a baby show. It is many years since our own city was favored with a similar exhibition. We have learned something since then, and we doubt if public opinion now would welcome a repetition of the entertainment. In fact, it is difficult to realize the possibility of such an occurrence in any civilized community at this stage of the world's progress. Of course there will always be men ready to commit any folly for the sake of gain. But one would suppose it less easy to find women, even among the least refined or perverted in every instinct of maternal delicacy as to be willing to put their offspring on a level with rare poodles and prize pigs.—*N. The State of Oregon vs James Wilson; defendant arraigned on the indictment for robbery, being armed with a dangerous weapon; given until Thursday to plead.

State vs James Wilson; defendant arraigned on the indictment for assault with intent to kill Alex Hamilton and allowed till Thursday to plead.

J C N Moreland was appointed by the Court counsel for defendant in each case.

Venire for ten additional jurors ordered for Thursday at nine [illegible].

Thursday, Aug 18.—State of Oregon vs James Quigley—assault with a dangerous weapon; defendant pleaded not guilty; trial occupied great part of the day.

The Sheriff returned venire of ten additional jurors: James B [illegible]well, J W Dodge, C D Folger, D [illegible] Lewis, J W Davis, C S Towle, C B Sutter, James H Reed, Lemuel Bills, W S Ogden.

State of Oregon vs James Wilson—indictment for highway robbery, being armed with a dangerous weapon; prisoner pleaded guilty to the indictment; Saturday 20th set for passing sentence.

A juror excepted on the Quigley case, excused for the term.

Thos Tucker and Jacob Hoover vs the Oregon Central Railroad Company, Washington county, Hyer Jackson, Sanford Wilcox, John Chapman, J D Merryman, W J Chatfield, W S Ladd and Wm S Smith. Perpetual injunction against the Commissioners and other officers of Washington county, restraining them from ordering, directing or making any provisions for the further payment of any of the interest coupons of the bonds of the O C R R Co, and from levying or collecting any further tax for such purpose in Washington county, and restraining the O C R R Co and its officers and agents from transferring, selling or in any manner disposing of such bonds or coupons. It is further adjudged that the orders of the county court of Washington county heretofore made for the payment of such interest coupons and the agreement between the county of Washington and the O C R R Co, and the undertaking of the said county to pay said interest coupons are illegal and void.

The grand jury came into court and presented four bills of indictment, names of indicted parties suppressed.

State of Oregon vs Wm Watkins, bill ignored.

State of Oregon vs Joseph Hackney, bill ignored.

State of Oregon vs John Dosher, bill ignored.

SEVERE ACCIDENT ON THE WHITE HOUSE ROAD.—On Wednesday afternoon a family of several persons named Thomas, met with a serious accident on the White House road near the Fulton House. The family were moving from Idaho and bound up the valley. In going up a hill the team balked and backing down, the wagon and team went over a bank and rolled some distance into a deep ravine. All the persons in the wagon except Mrs Thomas succeeded in jumping out before it went over the bank. Mrs Thomas went with the wagon, and when she was secured from the wreck she was found to be very seriously injured. She was taken to the house of Mr A H Johnson, where she still lies in a critical condition. Dr Chapman, of this city, is attending her.

MR. E. C. MELVILLE'S BENEFIT.—On Tuesday evening next, Mr E C Melville of the Bates Dramatic Company, will take a benefit at Oro Fino Theater, tendered him by the members of the company and his many friends outside. Mr. Melville is an actor of decided talent, and has attached to himself a host of friends, during his stay in Portland. The excellent manner in which the several pieces played during the late extravaganza season was largely attributable to the genius of Mr Melville. It was he who adapted and localized the burlesque of "Fra Diavolo," which had a longer run than any piece of the season. The programme for the benefit is not yet announced, but we suppose Mr Melville will give us something rich, rare and racy.

ORO FINO THEATER.—EXTRA NIGHT.—In answer to a generally expressed desire on the part of theater goers, Mr. Bates, the lessee of Oro Fino Theater, will open that place of amusement to-morrow evening and will present for the evening's entertainment the drama of "The Deaf Man of the Village, or Milky White," "The Day After the Fair," and a musical melange, in which the Pixley Sisters, Miss Ingles, Messrs Bates, Vinson, Melville, Clinton and others, will appear. The extra night will happily break the monotony which hangs so heavily on everybody's hands, and the public will welcome it.

CHURCH SPIRE COMPLETED.—The new spire of the Taylor Street M. E. Church was completed yesterday, and the workmen took down a considerable part of the immense staging around it. Somebody had the good taste and the influence to have the horrible-looking Greek Cross taken down from the apex and a neater finish substituted, for which he or she is entitled to the thanks of all spire-gazers while the spire shall endure. As now the structure is both imposing and graceful. The entire outside finish of the building is drawing on rapidly to completion.

TRANSIT TRADE—BUSINESS.—Last evening there stood on the track at East Portland a long train of construction cars, brought down from various places on the road to receive freights of railroad iron and material. One or two loaded trains went up yesterday. Things are looking, that way, most decidedly business-like. It is designed to take out on the road all material as fast as it comes out of the ships now in port and to arrive.

OFFICERS OF NONPAREIL LODGE.—The following are the officers of Nonpareil Lodge I. O. G. T. for the current term: John P Walker, W C T; Mary McMurray, W V T; E W Ryan, W S; Joseph M Wolf, W A S; J F Davis, W F S; [illegible] Wiggs, W T; W E Sanders, W M; Lizzie Alexander, W I G; C W Lewis, W O G; Rev I Dillon, W C; G W Durand, P W C T. Present membership 78.

WANTS A CORRECTION.—Some time ago we published an item saying that one Charles Love had stabbed a woman named Cassidy in this city and had then left town. We have now a letter from one Charles Love, from Astoria, wishing the item corrected, as he says it is untrue every word of it. Perhaps [illegible] mistaken in the first instance [illegible] mistaken [illegible] he is now. We don't know.

CONTESTED ELECTION CASE IN LINN COUNTY.—Mr Burmester [illegible] informs us that the case of the State ex Rel. Whitney vs [illegible] A Johns, a case for the office of County Judge of Linn county, was argued finally on Tuesday before Judge [illegible] and submitted. The Judge [illegible] the matter as yet under advisement.

RACES.—There will be a trotting race at the White House track tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock [illegible] purse of $[illegible] and an inside stake of $25. The following horses will go: John Ladd's Mohawk, James Welch's Humboldt, and B B Acker's Mac [illegible] heats two best in three. There would [illegible] be some [illegible] sport on the [illegible].

RAILROAD SURVEY.—[illegible] with his survey [illegible] [illegible] yesterday from the lower end [illegible] survey [illegible] Corne[illegible] [illegible] north of [illegible] and thence [illegible]. After completing this [illegible] party will commence a survey from Forest [illegible].

ARRIVAL.—The bark [illegible] was towed up yesterday morning by the steamer [illegible] and she is now moored at the East Portland railroad wharf, where she will discharge a locomotive and tender and other cargo of railroad material.

MILITARY.—We [illegible] San Francisco paper the following War Department [illegible] of August 11: "Major [illegible] is assigned to the Department of [illegible] report for duty."

CIRCUS.—Posters of the most gorgeous pattern are up, announcing that Dan Castello's Great Overland Circus and Menagerie will open in this city Wednesday evening, Aug 31st.

ADMITTED TO CITIZENSHIP.—John J Flint was admitted to citizenship in the U. S. District Court, on Wednesday.

CURRENT NOTES.

The Petersburg Index has an article on the decline of duelling in Virginia, which concludes as follows: "Upon the whole, in its old age it had become a nuisance and a bore. Let us take off our hats to the old thing for the last time, and bury him decently out of our sight."

The New York Democrat says: "It is a great pity Grant did not go to Europe to learn a little something about war." We suspect that Gen. Lee and some others, who may be even better authorities than Brick Pomeroy, would admit that Grant is already fully posted on the subject

Secretary Stanton is credited with saying: "The best invention for killing was made by God Almighty, when he created man. I would rather have one good soldier with a single charge in his gun, determined to kill somebody, than a new recruit armed with a repeater, and followed by a wagon-load of ammunition."

It is stated that all the work possible is to be forthwith done at the navy yards. The Norfolk channel will be entirely freed from the obstructions placed there during the war, the docks will be improved, and four large dredging machines have been purchased in order to improve the channels about the Washington, New York, League Island and other navy yards of the country.

A Saratoga tombstone bears this inscription, which, though it might be appropriate if addressed to young girls, can scarcely have much effect upon the "butterflies" who gaily flaunt about that watering place. Here is the inscription, however, and our readers can solve its application to "single women" if they can: "Emma, dau'r of Abraham and Matilda Cox, and wife of Theodore Schallehn, died Aug. 10, 1868, Æ. 26 years, leaving five children—married too young, against her father's will. Single women take warning."

Says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican: "Quite a romance was connected with the family of Mrs. S. B. Merriman, who died a few days ago at Waterbury. She was very beautiful in her youth and was sought by Mr. Merriman and by J. M. L. Scoville, who was disappointed. Scoville waited patiently until the oldest daughter of his first love captivated him, but again found himself too late, she having become affianced to a Mr. Morton. Scoville again waited, and when Morton died won his widow, to whom he afterward left a handsome fortune.

Some correspondence has recently been had by the Treasury Department with parties in New York and Boston, as to the loss of value in gold coin by handling in the course of business. The test in New York on coin taken at random from that received at the Sub-Treasury, showed twenty-five pennyweights deficiency on five thousand dollars of half eagles, quarter eagles, and gold dollars, and a deficiency something less on larger pieces—but the office says it never rejects any coin however light, if its short weight is due to the natural wear from use in ordinary business. At the Custom House in Boston the correspondence says coin is required to come up to a certain standard. There is no law of Congress nor any regulation of the Treasury Department with reference to this matter.

OREGON.

From the Statesman: Mr. Denlinger came back from Salmon river yesterday and reports that about 40 wagons are in there at the present time, averaging about six to the wagon, which would make nearly 250 people, visiting the place this week. All seemed to enjoy themselves splendidly and the effect on all seemed to be most invigorating and healthful. The National camp meeting commenced Friday and was continued Saturday and Sunday, Revs. Devore and Cornell officiating. Twenty-nine States were represented by the attendants at Sunday's meeting.

The Salem Statesman says: The project for building a new Methodist Church, on the site of the present edifice, which was completed and occupied 18 years ago this fall, has been inaugurated under most favorable circumstances. We understand that Bros. Thomas Cross and J. L. Parrish give assurance of $2,000 each, and many others will give in proportion, and from our knowledge of the ability and enterprise of those who compose that denomination in this city we have no doubt that within two years from this fall a $30,000 temple will form one of the greatest ornaments to our city, and stand sacred to the worship of God. The permission of the city authorities will be asked, to permit the temporary removal of the present church to the Public Square opposite, and eventually it may be moved to North Salem and answer for a church edifice there.

A PROLIFIC RACE.—No person can visit Virginia City without being surprised at the numerous proofs of the fertility of the native women of Nevada, the Piute squaws. Children literally swarm about their camps, and when a Piute matron takes her promenade through the streets she might aptly be compared to an old hen quail at the head of her brood. Men, women and children present a most hardy and robust appearance. Old Jim, a Piute of strong Mormon proclivities, has three wives and a whole hillside of children. Some tribes of aborigines may be dying out, but the Piutes are not to be numbered with any of such slight stamina, the divine command to "increase and multiply" is not lost upon them. At present they are comfortably dressed, have plenty to eat, and are happy as the day is long; but eventually they will be unable to obtain food and clothing gratis of the whites, when it will be necessary to find some work for them to do. Owing to the nature of the country in which they were born and have grown up—a poor game region—they are not strongly addicted to the chase, and have no false pride in regard to laboring at any kind of work they can do; therefore, they may sometimes prove useful.—Virginia Enterprise.

British Industry and Commerce.

We have received a pamphlet written by a Manchester man, on "the present and long continued stagnation of trade in Great Britain, and its causes, effects and cure." The author sets forth that British imports in 1854 exceeded the export of British productions £55,213,327, in 1860, £74,639,646; and in 1868, £116,047,922; that while the imports of the country have increased to £143,113,513 since 1854, the exports have increased but £82,278,918. To this difference is credited the distress prevalent in the country and the continuing emigration. The balance of the foreign trade in 1868 was £116,000,000 sterling, and has to be paid in coin. While £81,952,193 of the imports consist of food and articles that cannot be produced at home, and are charged with light duties, the remaining £213,569,323 are duty free, and destroy British commercial industry. The fabrications of these things would employ labor at home, and prevent distress and emigration. Imports from Russia, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Prussia, Belgium, France, Spain and the United States, in 1868, amounted to £128,351,948, or £80,996,427 over the exports to those countries. The state of trade with France has been going from bad to worse. And in the cotton trade the United States and Continental Europe employ 35,500,000 spindles, to 35,000,000 in Great Britain and Continental spinners are actually selling their goods there. Instead of the prosperity promised as the result of reduced customs tariffs, the £4,939,861 distributed in relief to the poor in 1853, had swollen to £7,500,000 in 1868; one in every eighteen of England and Wales receives parochial relief, and 3,000,000 have emigrated to other countries, increasing foreign competition. The distress is felt in iron, cotton, woolen, silk, linen, and all trades, and all owing to too liberal a foreign policy. The accumulated wealth of the country has prevented the suffering being greater; but this is daily lessening. Domestic manufactures, saddled with domestic taxation, cannot compete with foreign manufactures, while British manufactures are taxed in foreign countries. The system that obtains now not only prevents English industry from reducing the English debt, but really saddles it with reducing foreign debts Since the present policy was inaugurated, England has been excluded from trading with countries having over 60,000,000 of people. They are extending their manufactures, and vieing with England in English markets. Consignments are made at a loss, on a large scale, owing to the stoppage of legitimate trade, and so markets that remain open are glutted. The writer traces many of the manufacturing troubles now experienced, and urges that all raw material for manufacture, and for the support of the masses, should be admitted duty free; that all articles of luxury should be heavily taxed, and exact reciprocity insisted upon.

The efficiency of the present administration of the Internal Revenue bureau is indicated by the comparative statistics lately published. The receipts for the first fifteen months of Mr. Delano's management were more than $66,500,000 greater than for the last fifteen months of Mr. Rollins' direction of the bureau. It should be remembered further that this increased sum was derived from greatly reduced taxes. These figures show that the President's promise that there should be a faithful and honest collection of the revenue has been fully redeemed.

The Blood in Summer.

The blood deteriorates in hot weather. Profuse perspiration deprives it of a portion of its nourishing and reproductive properties. Consequently, in summer, the flesh loses in some degree its firmness, the muscles lack their usual elasticity and vigor, and the weight of the body diminishes. These are clear indications that the life sustaining principle afforded by the food we eat, is not sufficient to meet the requirements of the system under a high temperature. There is another reason for this, besides the direct influence of the heat, viz. the loss of appetite and the weakening of the digestive powers which it occasions. Under these circumstances a wholesome invigorant is evidently needed, and the best and safest is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This admirable vegetable tonic and alterative, acts favorably upon the system in several ways. It increases the appetite and facilitates digestion, thereby inclining the stomach to receive and enabling it to assimilate a due amount of nourishment. It also tones the relaxed secretive organs and the bowels. Under its operation the process of emaciation, occasioned by the drain through the pores is arrested, the whole frame refreshed and invigorated, and the spirits exhilarated. The dyspeptic, bilious, the nervous, the debilitated, scarcely need to be told that it is precisely the stimulant and corrective they ought to take at this season. Thousands of them know the fact by experience. Nothing in the pharmacopoeia (or out of it) will supply its place—least of all the trashy local nostrums which some unscrupulous dealers would be glad, for the benefit of their pockets, to palm off in its stead.

This Remedy does not simply relieve for a short time, but it produces perfect and permanent cures of the worst cases of Chronic Nasal Catarrh and I will pay $500 reward for a case that I cannot cure. "Cold in the head" and Catarrhal Headache are cured with a few applications. If you have a discharge from the nose, offensive or otherwise, stopping up of the nose at times, partial loss of the sense of smell, taste or hearing, eyes watering or weak, feel dull, have pain or pressure in the head, you may rest assured that you have Catarrh. Thousands annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, terminate in Consumption and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive or less understood by physicians. I will send my pamphlet on Catarrh to any address free. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is now

SOLD BY MOST DRUGGISTS IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Price 50 cents. Sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of 60 cents, or four packages for two dollars. Beware of counterfeits and worthless imitations. See that my private Stamp, which is a positive guarantee of genuineness, is upon the outside wrapper. Remember that this private Stamp, issued by the United States Government expressly for stamping my medicines has my portrait, name and address, and the words "U. S. Certificate of Genuineness," engraved upon it, and need not be mistaken. Don't be swindled by travelers and others, representing themselves as Dr. Sage; I am the only man now living that has the knowledge and right to manufacture the genuine Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I never travel to sell this medicine.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT.

Nature's Prescription.—When Nature produces a great remedy for disease, the best thing science can do is to follow her prescription. By separating the water of the famous Seltzer Spring into its elements, science has discovered the means by which the world-renowned Spa effects such unparalleled cures, and by combining these elements artificially in TARRANT'S EFFERVESCENT SELTZER APERIENT, the grand panacea of Nature is rendered universally and instantly available. At this season when fevers, disorders of the stomach and bowels, bilious complaints and all other diseases which affect the digestive, assimilating and secreting organs are especially prevalent, the importance of having this invaluable alterative and corrective at hand in every house, and within reach of all who travel by land or water, cannot be over estimated.

France's Best Ally

THE RED [illegible], KING OF MONEY BAGS

[From the Boston [illegible]]

In the Juden Strasse in Frankfort is a tall, rough [illegible] house which strangers particularly such as have a commercial tendency [illegible] peculiar interest in examining. It is the birthplace of the Rothschilds, the financial magnates who have propped up more thrones and [illegible] monarchs than any banker since the days of the Florentine Peruzzi who [illegible] stiffened the legs of [illegible], but whose vast fortune [illegible] its worthless heirs, is like its founders well nigh forgotten. In all these years since Anselm [illegible] time, 1743, or thereabouts, the family has been amassing riches by loans, purchases and other regular methods, and meeting with no reverses save those of 1816 when the revolutionary whirlwind swept away values and despots indiscriminately. Some two score millions would cover that particular damage, an amount which was soon recovered. Every nation in Europe has tested the Rothschilds' purse. England drew upon it to the extent of $200,000,000, Austria some $80,000,000, France over $80,000,000, and Naples, Russia, Tuscany and smaller states found its help in the time of need. Even Prussia discovered $40,000,000 in the Juden Strasse when she could have procured it nowhere else, and as for private enterprises, railways, steamboats, canals and so on—there was hardly one in which the security was even passable that failed to obtain the cash resources essential to development and success.

When the head of the house in Paris died, not long since, it required months even to estimate his wealth, it was of such vast extent and so varied in its character, and since his death equally able management has further increased the value of the whole until the accumulation attains a figure almost beyond the possibility of comprehension. With their wealth, too, has come to the Rothschilds a reputation for integrity based upon that well known transaction with the fugitive Elector of Hesse Cassel, whose $1,000,000 in silver, hurriedly deposited, was returned to him swollen with the eighteen years' interest they paid for its safe and lucrative keeping. The Paris house has taken the control of all the branches of the firm within the past ten years, the original one at Frankfort becoming, like those of Vienna, London and Naples, a subordinate. So vast at last has grown this concentrated power, and so judicious is its application, that the Rothschild influence now extends to all the bourses and exchanges of Europe, and Rothschild operations supply a barometer for the guidance of banking houses the world over. As the Rothschilds move so moneyed men in London, San Francisco and New York move their facilities for information and the never failing shrewdness that point their action being universally acknowledged.

Such a power, it may be imagined, is prodigious. Although flying no banners and beating no drums, it is superior to an army, however numerous. Needle guns and Chassepots cannot resist the subtle force of a cheque, despotism and imperialism are powerless to coerce the credit willingly accorded by this firm's asking. Consequently there is a significance in the resignation by Alfonso Rothschild of the Prussian consulate at Paris which will be readily comprehended in counting houses in various parts of the world. The office was conferred to placate the injuries inflicted upon the Rothschild and other banking houses when Frankfort was absorbed by Prussia—that lively period succeeding Sadowa when free cities and free provinces were swallowed without so much as by your leave, when German potentates fled to Paris and Vienna, and sustained lawsuits in London and insults and humiliation everywhere, from Stuttgart to Stralsund. All Frankfort was wroth at Prussia's exactions. The levies made by Bismarck exceeded the worst anticipations, and naturally engendered the bitterest hostility against the kingdom he represented.

The abrupt relinquishment of this official honor is an unequivocal proof of Rothschild memories and a decided expression of the Rothschild sympathies. It means aid to France as the house has before aided her, and it also indicates a belief that she is worth farther aiding. This antagonism of finance may prove formidable to Prussia, whose exchequer is not so plentiful as rumor pretends. To the Rothschilds will go the possessions and funds of all who seek a safe deposit for them, and their resources will thus swell into an unparalleled magnitude. As France contains so much that makes the Rothschilds' wealth and, as we have said, loans having already been made here, the Emperor will find whatever additional accommodation he may need. His empire represents payment in full, his downfall repudiation. Such an alliance is better for him than that of any kingdom. It means supplies and arms, and a capacity to prolong the war indefinitely. The financial soundness of the Rothschilds being involved in the security of France, they will hardly fail to use all their efforts to secure both—their efforts, it being understood, comprising the efforts of all the great bankers with whom they are so closely and indissolubly allied.

How Napoleon Went to the Field.—European papers state that the baggage of the French Emperor which preceded him to the seat of war looked more like a traveling hospital than the traps of a general. It contained among others a large medicine chest, three kinds of bathing tubs, and some other bathing apparatus, an invalid's easy chair, a stretcher of peculiar construction, and a great deal of other medical and sick room apparatus. The horses of the Emperor which were sent to the front were most carefully selected from the Imperial stables by the Emperor's own valet. He picked out the tamest and gentlest brutes he could find and even went so far as to buy some horses, not so much for their beauty and spirit, for they show very little of either, as for their meek and gentle demeanor. Before they were sent to the front they were exposed to a great deal of artillery firing to accustom them to the roar of cannon, the only thing their rider will probably hear of the battle, and this took the last vestige of spirit they still possessed away from them. The valet was also most particular in examining the saddles destined for use of His Majesty, had all double wadded, and had extra paddings put on the back.

Foolhardiness.—The City of Ragusa is supposed to be lost. She is a tiny craft performing a foolhardy expedition across the Atlantic. There is no special bravery in this, still less of public utility. Bligh of the Bounty navigated the South seas and the Indian ocean in an open boat. Whaleboats have lived through the heaviest seas. But Bligh, in his sober senses, would not start across the ocean in an open boat, nor would a whale boat start from the ship's side in a fog. Those eccentric actions, done for notoriety's sake, prove nothing, achieve nothing, and only call to mind Frederick the Great and his artillerymen. In a review a gun having stuck in a ditch, a driver of immense strength rushed to the wheel and lifted it bodily out of the ditch. The King praised him and gave him his purse. Another giant, envying his comrade's good fortune, seized an opportunity when the King was looking his way to lift a field gun off the ground and place it at "carry arms." The King inquired how he dared act without orders, and put him under arrest for playing the fool.

A Venerable Newspaper.—On the 17th July the Worcester, (Mass.) Spy celebrated its hundredth birthday, and reprinted as a supplement a fac simile of the first issued by Isaiah Thomas on the 17th of July 1770. The fac simile is a small half sheet called The Massachusetts Spy, printed at Boston, where for the first six months it came out tri weekly. In March, 1771, Mr Thomas enlarged it and made it a weekly, adorning its head, not with the present device, which was not then in existence, but with two primitive woodcuts, one representing the goddess of liberty, as significant of its principles, and the other two extraordinary infants picking flowers from a basket surmounted with the motto, They call the child [illegible] as emblematic of its enterprise. In 1775 the atmosphere of Boston grew too hot for a journal of the revolutionary character of the Spy, and the press and types were smuggled across Charles River and thence, the day after the battle of Lexington, to Worcester, where it has since been regularly published.

Upon which the stranger with much difficulty turned out and gave him the entire road. After he had got fairly by, the stranger turned and inquired of him when his father died, to which the grief harrowed citizen responded, "About fifteen years ago."

Telegraphic Nonsense about the War.

[From the Chicago Republican.]

Those who read the class of telegraphic dispatches sent North at the time the rebel forces bombarded Fort Sumter in 1861 will be better prepared to appreciate the war dispatches from the French army. The Charleston telegrams were magnificent highfalutin. Hundreds of cannon were depicted as vomiting their glut day and night into the little isolated fort, and the heavens were lit up for twenty miles about by explosive bombs and rockets. After three days of volcanic practice the astonishing news came over the wires that no one had been either killed or wounded. And then a natural horse laugh went up from all Europe at the unequaled absurdity of the dispatches when compared with the facts. It made us the butt and ridicule of the world.

Supremely ridiculous as were the accounts of the opening drama here, Napoleon has excelled them. A couple of companies of Prussian soldiers—a picket, or rear guard, were driven out of Saarbruck by "some battalions of the French," and the event is recorded in a style that puts the Fort Sumter affair to the blush. What a grand gloire is made at crowding back a Prussian picket, from a point not deemed of any military importance! The Emperor is so pleased that he telegraphs to Paris that Louis has received his baptism of fire, because he saw the little skirmish. And more astonishing still, the soldiers wept at his tranquility! It is supposed that the armies now fronting each other on the frontier number not less than 600,000 men, and this little affair, in which not a thousand took part, and the losses are not above ten on either side, is wrought up into a crying spell on the part of the French, because little Louis was so tranquil!

That is sent over to America as "war news," and it looks very much like it! Such sublimity of nonsense throws the first Bull Run "victory" into the shade. It shows that in silly gasconade, we can't hold a candle to Napoleon. The boys who went with Grant and Sherman can have their laugh now. They can appreciate the magnitude of the affair and the dewy condition of the eyes of the French army. How naturally the sublime blends with the ridiculous!

One Good Turn Deserves Another.

[From the New York Evening Mail Aug 3d.]

The recent correspondence between Secretary Fish and Baron Gerolt, the Prussian Minister at Washington, has shown a degree of cordiality between the two governments respectively represented which may seem to some somewhat exceptional. It may not be generally known how good reason there is for this feeling of international comity, but of the existence of such a cause there is no doubt.

Briefly—In 1862, Baron Gerolt was about the only representative of a foreign power at Washington who did not either openly or privately encourage the rebellion, or at least throw cold water on the enthusiasm of the friends of the Union. Under positive instructions from Bismarck, and in accordance with his own feelings, Baron Gerolt, from the first and through our darkest hours stood by us in every way in which he could do so as a representative of a neutral power. Not only was his sympathy and the moral support of his government of incalculable value in and of itself, but it led to constructions of neutral obligations which were of the utmost consequence to us, in 1862 and 1863 particularly. In those years, when we first had recourse to the new and odious expedient of conscription, demagogues strove to stir up among our foreign born population a feeling of hostility to the draft. How well they succeeded we all know, nor can we forget how many legal obstructions they resorted to in order to impair the efficiency of the law.

But the Prussian Minister from the first refused to aid his former countrymen in evasions of their military duty to their adopted country. He would not countenance the applications of Prussians for exemption, unless they showed by their passports that they were merely sojourners in this country. What would have happened had he and his government adopted a contrary course we can to some extent conceive. Had he made a hostile interpretation of the rights of unnaturalized Prussian citizens, the efficiency of the draft would have been materially impaired, and in some quarters it would have been resisted successfully.

It is for these reasons that our government holds such cordial relations with Prussia in her present hour of trial. Are they not sufficient?

A French Compliment to the Prussians.—Two years ago Gen. Changarnier wrote for the [illegible] Des Deux Mondes a remarkable article, in which he expressed a very high opinion of the Prussian military power. The great and principal force in the Prussian army, he said, has been in its officers. No doubt a large share of honor is due to the Government in its organization, patiently and carefully prepared, and the attention which was given to every improvement in the military art in a spirit of progress free from the shackles of prejudice and routine. Like the ancient Romans, the Prussians took what was bad, but all this was only done by means of a staff of well instructed, laborious officers, applying themselves without relaxation to a work often deemed excessive. These officers, as facts attested, were admirably seconded by their soldiers. Under the flag all classes of society found themselves represented, and intelligence came to the aid of discipline; the quality was a surer guarantee of success than the quantity.

Dickens's Wine Countries.—The following [illegible] point [illegible] age [illegible] opportunity of knowing, which [illegible] speaks:

The wine shops are the colleges and [illegible] of [illegible] Here the [illegible] in [illegible] and the [illegible] platforms are all taught in these colleges and chapels, where professors of evil continually [illegible] the lessons [illegible] rebuking [illegible] inciting to the demons of demoralization. In the sobriety of the poor the first is taught, and the iniquity of property [illegible], and assassination as justice of the people. It is in the wine shop that [illegible] to think it [illegible] about the middle [illegible] who disputes his fares. It is in the wine shop the workman is taught to admire the man who [illegible] his faithlessness. It is in the wine shop the domineering [illegible] of the employer who lowers the pay of employed. The wine shop is [illegible] physical atmosphere [illegible] moral pestilence [illegible] vengeance the men of crime [illegible]. Hunger is proverbially a bad counsellor, but drink is a worse.

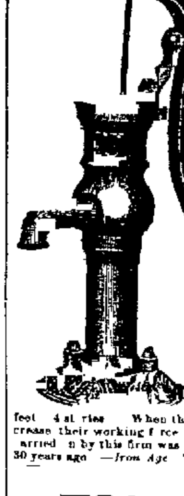
IN THE WORLD.



The Catalogue of RUMSEY & CO. of Seneca Falls embraces over 300 different styles and sizes of Lift and Force Pumps. They are now turning out 1,500 Pumps per week, which range in price from $3 00 to $400, employing 150 hands in the business. John A. Rumsey has recently patented an improved galvanized non corrosive cast iron Pump, which is safe from rust. An Improved Hand Fire Engine of great efficiency is also on their list. The machinery in Rumsey & Co's Factory is of the most efficient kind, much of it being of their own invention, and is driven by an unfailing water power. They are now building a new factory 84x42 feet, 4 stories. When this is completed they will increase their working force to 200 hands. The business carried on by this firm was established by Rumsey about 30 years ago.—From Age, New York. d14dtf

HOAGLAND'S

NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!

W. E. COOPER

HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive

Carriage Factory,

Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.

He respectfully refers to the following

CARD.

Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling invented by H. R. Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.

It fastens without bolt or screw, and will never fail, is easily and speedily separated. It rests on rubber, and so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which is so often disagreeable. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.

It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion not to use this new invention, and we consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent heretofore considered the best in use.

CITY ADVERTISEMENTS.

Ordinance No. 821

AN ORDINANCE TO PROVIDE FOR THE TIME and manner of improving that part of Oak street lying between the center of Second and the center of East Park streets.

The City of Portland does ordain as follows:

Section 1. The improvement of that part of Oak street lying between the center of Second street and the center of East Park street shall be completed as hereinafter provided on or before the twentieth day of September 1870.

Section 2. The surface of the street shall be cleared of all plank, timbers or other obstacles or perishable matter (sidewalks, crosswalks and plank roadways of the proper width and grade excepted). If the obstructions are not removed by the owners of the adjacent lots within three days from the service of notice by the Street Commissioner they shall be removed by and be come the property of the contractor.

Section 3. The improvement shall consist of grading, laying sidewalks, crosswalks, plank gutters and a plank roadway sixteen feet in width, the plank roadway to extend only to the crosswalks on the east side of East Park street.

Section 4. The work to be done and materials furnished shall all correspond with the provisions of, and under the regulations contained in Sections 5, 7, 8, 9, 11 and 12 of Ordinance No. 763, entitled "an Ordinance in relation to the improvement of streets."

Section 5. The Contractor shall take entire charge of the work during its progress and shall be responsible for any loss or accident occasioned by carelessness or neglect.

Section 6. The Committee on Streets and Public Property are hereby authorized to advertise for proposals, receive bids and enter into contract with the lowest responsible bidder or bidders for the improvement specified in this ordinance.

Section 7. The improvement shall be completed to the satisfaction of the Committee on Streets and Public Property and the Street Commissioner.

Passed the Common Council July 20, 1870.

W. S. CALDWELL,
Auditor and Clerk.

Approved July 22, 1870.
